

Abstract

A lead electrode, from an array of lead electrodes, is selectively coupled to a pulse generator device by positioning a lead connector including an array of connector contacts corresponding to the array of lead electrodes within a connector bore of the device for electrical engagement of a selected connector contact from the array of connector contacts with a device contact; the selected connector contact corresponding to the selected electrode.